Dear Mr. Claypool: Don't let us down

An open letter to Forrest Claypool, who last week was named CTA president by Mayor-elect Rahm Emanuel.

Dear Forrest,

First, congratulations on your new appointment. This position, overseeing a system that provides nearly 2 million rides on an average weekday, promises to be challenging.

You're coming to the CTA at a tenuous time. Service cuts and fare hikes are still on the table for next year, and riders are concerned about their personal safety in the wake of a rash of iPhone thefts and train safety after a Brown Line switching problem cut train service near the Belmont station for more than two hours on April 19.

You've served as Cook County commissioner and Park District superintendent, so you're more than familiar with Chicago. But since you're new to public transit, Going Public asks for your attention, please, to the three I's of successfully running the "I" (and bus) system.

» Look for creative solutions. Chicago needs to find new ways to raise money for CTA infrastructure and technology improvements. The agency's 2009 agreement with Apple to provide millions of dollars for a face-lift of the North/Clybourn Red Line station in exchange for leasing CTA land was groundbreaking—but there hasn't been a similar deal since. Look to corporations and organizations to adopt stations and find money to tap through grants and lobbying Springfield and Washington.

» Learn the system. He typically drives to work, but your predecessor, Rich Rodriguez, makes a point to ride the trains as frequently as possible during the workday. He's hard to miss, since he sometimes wears a bright red CTA hat while he rides. Also, he's known for painstakingly picking up garbage off the trains and platforms.

Riding the system often will allow you to assess station conditions firsthand, mingle with riders and learn their behavior and evaluate whether any routes need to be tweaked—knowledge that will help in budget negotiations.

» Listen to your workers and riders. Last year's service cuts and worker layoffs show the importance of developing a relationship with the transit unions. Meet with them early and try to find common ground.

Also, pay attention to rider feedback. Riders regularly send the CTA and GP emails with suggestions to improve service and problems to troubleshoot. Take time to personally respond if you can.

It also may help if you embarked on a transit listening tour, visiting CTA stations and meeting riders, following in the footsteps of Emanuel, who spent much of his campaign talking to commuters at transit stations across the city.

At the end of the day, riders just want a system that's accessible, safe and reliable. Your cooperation is requested.

—GP

Scott McGoon can't wait to watch the Bulls and Blackhawks—at the same time—Tuesday in his “man den.” DARRELL GOEMAAT PHOTO FOR TRIBUNE

Who ya gonna watch?

Overlap of Bulls and Hawks games tests Chicago fans' loyalties

Chicago Tribune

When the Bulls and the Blackhawks compete in season-defining games Tuesday, die-hard Chicago sports fan Scott McGoon won't have to decide between the teams.

He and his friends and family will be watching both, at once, through a split-screen feature on his high-definition Samsung.

“I couldn't choose between watching one game over the other,” McGoon said. “The picture-in-picture option kind of sold my ‘man den’ for everyone.”

The Bulls will play Indiana at 7 p.m. and could clinch the playoff series. The Blackhawks, meanwhile, are set to face Vancouver at 9 p.m. in a do-or-die Game 7.

The possibility of game-time overlap has left many fans negotiating their loyalties.

If Karen Mata, for instance, wants to watch the Bulls, she will have to do so from her bedroom. Her husband will be watching the Blackhawks on their main TV, she said.

“My husband is a huge Blackhawks fan, he hollers and yells,” Mata said, laughing. “So we try not to get near him during games.”

Sports bars and restaurants in Chicago also are preparing to accommodate the expected dual-sport fan rush.

Some boasting multiple TVs will switch a few screens to the Blackhawks game but likely will keep the sound on the Bulls game until it is over.

“Each bar will have to take the temperature of the [crowd],” said Ryan Indovina, director for the Four Corners Tavern Group. “[But] if people want to listen to the Bulls win a series, I think Chicago fans are patient enough and understand that one will come after the other.”

Others, however, plan to go directly to hockey if the Bulls game is not close. If both games intensify at the same time, Danny Hickey, general manager of Hawkeye's Bar & Grill, said he may turn the volume off in an effort not to favor either fan base.

“We'll have to play it by ear [to keep] these two worlds from colliding,” Hickey said.

“I couldn't choose between watching one game over the other. The picture-in-picture option kind of sold my ‘man den’ for everyone.”

Hey, come back with that hair!

Chicago Tribune

The last time crooks broke into Jay Han's beauty supply store, they made off with cash.

Early Easter morning, some enterprising thieves made off with more valuable loot: Nearly $80,000 worth of human hair.

The break-in occurred early Sunday in the rear of Beauty One, 616 W. Roosevelt Road, and was captured on videotape.

Han, 52, who has had the shop in the same location for more than six years, said he believes the thieves knew just how valuable the hair could be on the underground market.

The tresses, which are packaged with brand names such as Indi-Remy, Saga Hair and Bohyme Hair, are used to braid hair and for hair extensions especially in the African-American community, Han said.

He said the thieves targeted the most expensive brands, which are more durable and comfortable, and left behind poorer quality synthetic locks. They also made off with other hair products.

“They know, because they have a wife and they know what they do to beautify their hairstyles and how they invest their money to buy hair,” Han said. “They knew that there is a difference between synthetic hair.”

“They didn't touch money. They did better.”

Workers clean the mess at the Beauty One store Monday after thieves broke in over the weekend and stole almost $80,000 in human hair. ALEX GARCIA/TRIBUNE

Prosecutors mad about Maddow

Chicago Tribune

Rod Blagojevich has been warned by a federal judge about the perils of popping off to the media about his innocence, and on Monday prosecutors in the former governor's corruption trial served notice they want to use one of his TV interviews against him.

The interview occurred on "The Rachel Maddow Show" on MSNBC just days before Illinois lawmakers removed Blagojevich from office in late January 2009. The talk show host asked Blagojevich whether it would be wrong or criminal to trade his power to fill a U.S. Senate vacancy in exchange for something of value for himself.

"Oh, absolutely," Blagojevich answered, according to a transcript in a new court filing from prosecutors. He went on to say he had "absolutely not" done anything improper.

Blagojevich faces a wide array of corruption charges, including allegations that he tried to sell the Senate seat left open after Barack Obama's election to the presidency in 2008.

Now prosecutors are seeking to play the Maddow recording, arguing it is important because Blagojevich's attorneys at his first trial insisted that Blagojevich had no knowledge that he might be doing anything criminal related to the Senate appointment since none of his attorneys advised him so at the time.

The 16-second Maddow clip was not played at Blagojevich's first trial, which ended last summer with jurors deadlocked on all but one guilty count. Prosecutors also never had the opportunity to use it to help cross-examine the former governor because he abandoned earlier plans to take the witness stand in his own defense.

OPRAH IN THE WAY?

After two days of jury selection, 25 prospective panelists have survived the initial cuts, though no one has yet been picked to decide Blagojevich's fate.

Among those still in the running is one woman whose main issue with serving is that she would miss the May 10 taping of Oprah Winfrey's show.

U.S. District Judge James Zagel said he might fix the problem by canceling court that day, although he conceded "that seems a little over the top."

4 charged with ties to terror group

Chicago Tribune

Three weeks before the start of perhaps the most significant terrorism trial ever in Chicago, federal prosecutors unsealed charges Monday against four additional defendants for allegedly plotting the 2008 terrorist attacks in Mumbai, India, that killed more than 160 people.

The four—all considered fugitives—have alleged links to Lashkar e Tayyiba, a Pakistani-based terrorist group, and the prosecution's key witness has linked one of them to Pakistan's intelligence service. The new charges come as Chicagoan Tahawwur Hussain Rana faces a federal trial May 16 on charges he provided support to members of Lashkar as they planned the Mumbai attacks and a plot on a Denmark newspaper that wasn't carried out.

Among the new defendants is a Pakistani identified only by his alias of "Major Iqbal," who was charged with planning and funding terrorist attacks carried out by Lashkar.

The government has linked only Iqbal to Lashkar. David Coleman Headley, a U.S. citizen who pleaded guilty to conducting surveillance in advance of the Mumbai attacks and is expected to be the prosecution's star witness at trial, has identified Iqbal as a member of the country's Directorate for Inter-Services Intelligence, or ISI, according to court records.

Rana's lawyer, Charles Swift, said Monday his client denies the charges.

Murder suspect arrested at Mexico border

A man arrested in San Diego last week as he tried to enter the country from Mexico is believed to be a suspect in a 1994 murder in Chicago, authorities said Monday. U.S. Customs and Border Patrol officers at the San Ysidro Point of Entry took Alfredo Marin Ramirez, 39, into custody Friday.

Document: Chicago was terror target

A U.S. military document posted on the Internet on Monday by WikiLeaks reports that former Chicago gang member Jose Padilla met with the mastermind of the Sept. 11 attacks, Khalid Shaikh Mohammed, in 2002 and was ordered to find a terrorist target in Chicago.

Girl, 11, injured in hit-and-run

An 11-year-old girl was struck by a hit-and-run driver Sunday evening on the South Side. The accident happened about 6:25 p.m. on the 7800 block of South Hermitage Avenue, police news affairs Officer Hector Alfaro said. The girl was taken to Advocate Christ Medical Center in Oak Lawn, where she was listed in stable condition.

Japan embraces quake app

5 TOKYO In what has become an all-too-familiar experience in Tokyo, a crowded subway train screeches to a sudden halt. From around the car, mobile phones start to ring.

The sound is an emergency earthquake warning from an iPhone app that lets subscribers know when the quake will come, where the epicenter will be located and how strong the shaking will be. Often, seconds after the phone rings, the shaking starts.

Following the devastating March 11 earthquake and tsunami, which have left nearly 28,000 dead and missing, Japan has been hit by hundreds of aftershocks of

HOW POPULAR IS IT?

The app, based on technology developed by Japan's Meteorological Agency and railway firms, was released in November. Prior to March 11, there were 100,000 subscribers to Yure Kuru. But now there are at least 1.5 million, and the company has stopped counting.

varying strengths.

The app called Yure Kuru, or "shaking coming," was developed by RC Solution, a Tokyo firm that specializes in providing disaster-related information services, such as relaying warnings or letting people confirm the safety of friends and family.

"Emergency quake warnings began several years ago, but the equipment to receive them was quite expensive," said Akira Kuriyama, president of RC Solution. "We wondered if there wasn't a cheaper and easier way to provide this service, and we thought of smartphones."

The app is symbolized by a cartoon catfish, which, according to Japanese folk belief, are said to warn of quakes.

"We're very happy to be of service," Kuriyama said. "Among other things, there still isn't a lot of understanding about the quake warning. If our app helps more people learn about this and increases their safety, we'll be pleased."

"In view of the nature of the allegation, it would not be appropriate for the individual to be on parade for The Royal Wedding," the Ministry of Defense said in a statement.

British media reported that Reilly also called Kate Middleton a "stupid stuck up cow" and used an obscenity to describe her on Facebook. The Ministry of Defense declined to confirm that.

WESTERN CONFERENCE QUARTERFINALS ★ GAME 7

SEVEN WONDERS?

HAWKS THE BIGGEST ACT ON A HOT NIGHT FOR CHICAGO SPORTS AS THEY DIG OUT OF 3-0 HOLE

The Blackhawks celebrate Brian Campbell's goal in the second period of Game 4 against Vancouver on April 19. BRIAN CASSELLA/TRIBUNE

RedEye

Again, for the fourth time, the Blackhawks face the prospect of postseason elimination Tuesday night when they drop the puck with the Canucks at Rogers Arena in Vancouver in a Game 7 dripping with juicy storylines.

Will the Canucks crumble under the goalie controversy created when Roberto Luongo was pulled in favor of Cory Schneider in Game 6, only to get his job back when Schneider was hurt? Will the absence of the Blackhawks' Bryan Bickell, out after wrist surgery, finally be the injury that fells the reigning Stanley Cup champs? Will angry Canucks fans burn down Rogers Arena if their team fails to beat their playoff archrival for the third straight year? Will the officiating continue to baffle players, coaches and fans alike?

Only time will tell, of course, but this much is certain. For the Blackhawks, this is the biggest game they've played since Game 6 of the Stanley Cup finals last season, when they beat Philadelphia in overtime to win the title.

And it is the Flyers, ironically, from whom the Blackhawks could draw inspiration. In 2010, the Flyers battled their way into the playoffs on the last day of the season and then had to battle back from a 3-0 series deficit to escape the conference semifinals. Accomplishing that feat made them the third team ever to dig themselves out of a 3-0 hole. The 1942 Maple Leafs and 1975 Islanders also did it.

"It's a tough rink," Dave Bolland said of Rogers Arena. "Their fans like to yell and scream and it gets pretty loud. It will be tough, but I think we're going in there positive. We want to win this; we want to move on. To come back from 3-0 now going into Game 7 tied at 3-3, I don't think we want to lose now coming this far."

The Blackhawks game, however, is only one of the big games on tap for Chicago teams Tuesday. The Bulls, White Sox and Cubs also have something to play for. Here's a rundown of the big night in Chicago sports. TRIBUNE CONTRIBUTED

Joakim Noah
CHRIS SWEDA/TRIBUNE

BULLS

SCENARIO: Up 3-1 on Indiana in the best-of seven series.

WHAT'S AT STAKE: The Bulls can close out the series and advance to the second round for only the second time since the Michael Jordan era.

IMPORTANCE: With Derrick Rose hurting, the Bulls need to get some rest before heading into the next round, and a win would give them exactly that.

Adam Dunn
GETTY IMAGES

SOX

SCENARIO: The struggling Sox are playing on the big stage in New York against the Yankees.

WHAT'S AT STAKE: The White Sox are last in the AL Central and are trying to get something rolling before they find themselves in a big hole.

IMPORTANCE: While it still is very early in the baseball season, it is concerning that the Sox's offense, supposedly the team's strong point, has not clicked.

Kerry Wood
BRIAN CASSELLA/TRIBUNE

CUBS

SCENARIO: Facing Colorado, the Cubs are trying to keep pace in the NL Central.

WHAT'S AT STAKE: The Cubs enter the night among a group of four teams that are just a couple of games apart in the standings.

IMPORTANCE: Again, it's early, but if the Cubs can keep pace with starting pitchers Randy Wells and Andrew Cashner on the disabled list, it should be considered a victory.

1 Bulls and Hawks can both clinch Tuesday. What's your good-luck charm?	"Good Luck Chuck." If it can destroy my image of Jessica Alba, it can do anything.	Not paying my bills since the playoffs started.	My good-luck charm was Mike Quade's shiny bald head. Looks like I may need to trade it in, though.	A life-size cheese sculpture of Vince Vaughn. Hey wait. That is Vince Vaughn!	He's 6-5 and 220.
2 How big is Tuesday night for Chicago sports?	Let me explain this to Angela in pageant terms: "Eeeeeee!! OMG!" (waving at tears). Sorry, I meant Scott.	Bigger than Nick Leddy's supply of Just For Men Gel.	We'll know when we find out how many Chicagoans miss work Wednesday with laryngitis from all the cheering.	Last Tuesday was huge! It was the day NHL officiating decided it wanted you to win over Vancouver.	Bigger than my party Friday at Underground. Just kidding.
3 Make a prediction about Blackhawks-Vancouver Game 7.	Blackhawks 5, Canucks 4 in an OT thriller. Rahm Emanuel teleports in for the photo op.	John Scott will attempt and fail at a pass shorter than his height.	The Hawks will score just enough goals to make an entire Canadian province cry the next morning.	Canucks 5, Blackhawks 2. And a ton of Hawks fans on Twitter wondering where the calls were.	Don't call it a comeback! The Hawks are going to win the series.
4 If the Blackhawks pull off the miracle comeback, how will you celebrate?	A tattoo that says, "Ze Kane, boss, ze Kane!" You gotta go levels deep on that one.	Same way Seabs will: wake up in an unfamiliar place unsure of how I got there.	I plan to dance embarrassingly in front of friends and relatives alike, until they resort to throwing things.	By staring most of the night at a bottle of bye-bye pills. That or buy a Bolland jersey.	By wearing my Blackhawks jersey to my next appearance.
5 If Derrick Rose's ankle could talk, what would it be saying about Game 5?	"I'm never going to make it through 10 seasons with this guy. Is it too late to be Keith Bogans' ankle?"	"I can't breathe with that tape over me!"	Either, "They'll be talking about this in the same breath as the MJ flu game," or "YAAAAH, it HURTS!"	Ankle: "Derrick, we go way back, don't we?" Rose: "We sure do." Then lower his meds for talking to body parts.	"I'm good to go! Let's play ball!"

Lower Back Pain?

Are You or Someone You Know Suffering From Lower Back Pain?

Northwestern University is seeking volunteers who have lower back pain in order to determine where the pain is recognized in the brain. Participants will also be evaluated to determine why pain goes away for some people while it remains for others. This is a 12 month study consisting of 1 visit at the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago and 5 MRI scans at Northwestern Memorial Hospital's Olson Pavilion. All visits will take place in downtown Chicago.

- Eligible participants must:
- Be 18 years or older
  - Have a history of lower back pain which began 4-16 weeks ago with pain radiating into the buttocks or legs
  - Be able to undergo a MRI (no pacemakers, metallic implants, or spinal implants)

Please call 312-503-3181 for more information on how you can take part in this research study.

ROSE: I WILL PLAY

INJURED ANKLE WON'T KEEP BULLS STAR OUT OF GAME 5

Derrick Rose
CHRIS SWEDA/TRIBUNE

Chicago Tribune

There hasn't been this much attention paid to Bulls footwear since the original Air Jordans debuted.

Derrick Rose ditched his walking boot for flip-flops Monday, which meant he again missed practice because of his sprained left ankle. Given that flip-flops offer about as much ankle support as a wet paper towel, it's obvious Rose's injury is responding to treatment. Rose confirmed his swelling is subsiding and vowed to take a painkilling injection and play in Tuesday's Game 5 against Indiana.

The Bulls can close out their Eastern Conference quarterfinal series against the Pacers with a victory at the United Center, where they are 38-5.

"It's getting better every day," Rose said. "It's not broken, so I'm definitely playing. There's still some swelling, but it hurts more on the inside. I'm fine. After I take the shot, I shouldn't feel anything. Hopefully, I can still perform."

"This one is minor. I'm just happy the trainers have been making sure I'm getting my treatment, and it's coming along fine."

Coach Tom Thibodeau and Rose's teammates expect him to play and respect that, for the second straight opportunity, he didn't blame his 6-for-22 performance in Game 4 on his ankle.

"In the NBA these days, it's really popular to milk your injuries and let everyone know you're hurt, let everyone know how much pain you're playing in," Kyle Korver said. "That's not Derrick at all. He's got huge heart. He's shown it all year."

"He's tough. He doesn't ever complain. He's played so many minutes. He's played with injuries you guys don't know about. That's something that as a teammate you really respect."

The Pacers have fouled Rose hard and aggressively trapped him, using long-armed defenders such as Paul George and Dahntay Jones. After scintillating performances in games 1 and 2, Rose has shot 25 percent in games 3 and 4, though he did make the game-winning, lefty layup in Game 3.

The Bulls have committed too many turnovers, particularly in the first half, and struggled with ball movement to exploit the Pacers' double-teaming.

"You have to give them credit," Thibodeau said. "They're playing good defense. They have great length. We have to take better care of the ball. Our turnovers have led them to some easy scores. But we're up 3-1. You don't get up in a series unless you're doing some things well."

FULL O'BULL

A ROUNDUP OF PLAYOFF
NEWS AND NOTES

COACH KORVER

Bulls guard/forward Kyle Korver is not only a pretty accurate shooter himself (he's hit eight of 10 3-pointers in the playoffs), but he's apparently a pretty good teacher too. "He's a phenomenal shooter. He helps some of us work on our jump-shooting," Bulls forward Taj Gibson said. "He works with us, even after practice. He just shoots the ball phenomenally in practice. He never misses. We'll say we will do an 80-shot drill. He will probably make 78 out of the 80 shots. And that's tough, shooting around the five spots."

THIS AGAIN?

Yes, some wise sportswriter actually asked Bulls coach Tom Thibodeau if he would start Korver at shooting guard instead of Keith Bogans. "We're not changing," Thibodeau said, assumingly with an irritated look on his face. "We got to this point by playing a certain way. We have a good rotation. We feel good about our bench. We just have to play better, be ready from the start and hopefully improve."

Luongo looks like he's seen a ghost

Roberto Luongo lies in bed sprawled out on his stomach sleeping. He hears a knock on his door.

"Who are you?" Luongo asks.

"It's me, Cory Schneider."

"What are you doing here? I thought you were hurt."

"I've come to say you will be visited by three spirits."

"Why?"

"You are being haunted by the Chicago Blackhawks."

Schneider leaves, and Luongo falls asleep, then awakes to the sound of loud steps coming up the stairs. A giant on skates enters.

"I'm Dustin Byfuglien, the ghost of playoffs past."

"Not you again! I thought the Blackhawks got rid of you."

"They did, but I live on in your mind. Come with me."

Luongo and Byfuglien appear in the United Center during the 2010 playoffs. They watch as Byfuglien stands in front of the net, scoring.

"You wouldn't move out of the way! You were too big!"

"Before you, I was just an underachieving forward. But now I'm an All-Star defenseman and Stanley Cup champion."

"What about the first three games? I was awesome!"

"Three games doesn't win a series. You took a bewildered No. 8 seed and helped them remember they are the Stanley Cup champs."

Luongo appears back in his room asleep when he hears a knock at the door.

"I'm Dave Bolland, the ghost of playoffs present."

Bolland and Luongo go to Rogers Arena as workers prepare the arena for Game 7.

"Look at the people working," Bolland says. "This is Vancouver. All they have is the Canucks."

They go to the locker room.

"Here's poor Coach Vigneault. He hasn't slept all night because he's been trying to decide on his starting goalie. His job is on the line."

"I was nominated for the Vezina trophy! I won a gold medal!"

"You also turned me into Mario Lemieux. That's hard to do. I plan on scoring another goal tonight too."

Luongo appears back in bed. A man quietly enters the room.

"I'm the ghost of playoffs yet to come."

"I don't recognize you."

"I'm Ben Smith. Not many people know me. Except the goal judge. I'm going to show you some things you might not like."

Smith and Luongo appear in Sweden where two middle-age brothers sit around a TV watching the Stanley Cup finals.

"Look at the Tiny Sedin Twins. With you in net, they never beat the Blackhawks in the playoffs. And since they're twins, they felt double the pain."

"How can I change this?" Luongo asks.

"Play in the Eastern Conference, where you don't have to face the Blackhawks. They're in your head. You've already been mentally defeated by them. You are hours away from completing one of the single most epic collapses in sports history. When are you a free agent?"

"Um ... 11 years."

"You're pretty much Scrooged."

SCOTT BOLOHAN IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

America, you are voting in the "Madden NFL 12" cover athlete election, and your choices are Philly quarterback Michael Vick and Cleveland running back Peyton Hillis. You know what you must do. Vote Vick, early and often. Karma and the "Madden" cover jinx will do the rest.

txtable

TODAY'S DOGFIGHT

Whom would you rather the Bulls face in the second round: Atlanta or Orlando?

Text "atlanta" or "orlando" to 87708. Whizzer will send you the results instantly.

ANOTHER FLOP

Manchester United midfielder Darron Gibson quit Twitter after two hours because people were criticizing him. I see soccer players can't absorb virtual hits, either.

HOORAY!

A judge has sided with the players in the NFL labor dispute. That's a win for the millionaires against the billionaires, for you counting at home.

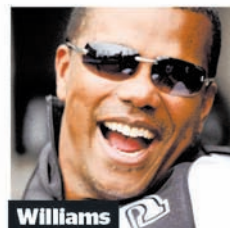

Hall

HALL, NO PASS

Washington cornerback DeAngelo Hall is still talking about his four-interception game of Jay Cutler last season. "Jay is definitely a clown," Hall said. In other breaking news, the Redskins' 6-10, last-place record from last season remains intact as well.

Williams

LET IT BE KNOWN

White Sox General Manager Kenny Williams says no staff member's job is in jeopardy after the team's sluggish start. He didn't say anything about players' job security, though. I'd like to think that'll sit in the back of some minds on the South Side.

TREATED

Bryan Bickell, I'll share my doggie downers with you as you recover from surgery. I know you'll be back for the Stanley Cup finals, though.

SPORTS BRIEFS

» The Red Stars have come back from the brink. The women's soccer team announced Monday it will play this season in the Women's Premier Soccer League. Home games will be at Benedictine in Lisle.

» A federal judge has sided with NFL players and granted their request for a preliminary injunction to lift the lockout. The owners are expected to appeal the ruling.

» Colorado 5, Cubs 3
» White Sox 2, N.Y. Yankees 0

Ravinia rebound

This year's lineup might bring you back again and again

By Matt Pais

Admittedly, there have been years when it was tough to put together more than five must-see Ravinia shows. There just weren't enough acts worth noting.

This year, though, we've got 14 acts you or someone you know probably will want to see at the annual summerlong bash in Highland Park, which puts its tickets on sale Wednesday morning.

Certainly not all of these will appeal to everyone (do Maroon 5 and Steely Dan share fans?), but it's a start. Go to metromix.com for complete info on Ravinia. One thing, though: In case you haven't noticed in the past couple of years, the days of the $10 lawn ticket are well behind us.

JUST LOOZA IT

Eminem headlines this year's explosion of sound

RedEye

Eminem didn't clean up at this year's Grammys as was expected, but as was rumored, he will headline Lollapalooza from Aug. 5-7 at Grant Park.

The Detroit rapper leads a list of more than 130 bands announced Tuesday that include Foo Fighters, Coldplay, Muse, My Morning Jacket and Cee Lo Green. Performers with local connections include Smith Westerns, Maps and Atlases, OK Go and two former Fall Out Boys—Patrick Stump goes solo and Pete Wentz performs with his new band, Black Cards.

Charlie Jones, one of the partners of Texas-based promoters C3 Presents, told the Tribune he expects crowds for the seventh annual Chicago-based festival to be at least equal in size to last year's record-breaking three-day attendance of 240,000. The bands will perform on eight stages.

Single-day passes go on sale June 7 for $90; three-day passes are going for $215. For ticket information, go to lollapalooza.com.

EM'S DAY OUT

Eminem's recovery will be complete when he headlines Lollapalooza from Aug. 5-7. But what's the rapper going to do in Chicago when he's not on stage? RedEye has some suggestions for Em, whose "Recovery" was the best-selling album of 2010. REDEYE

» Think you can curse quick? Stop at the Wiener's Circle for a late-night rap battle and get Shady.

» Visit the trial of former Gov. Rod Blagojevich to perform "Love the Way You Lie."

» Do what every dad who visits Chicago must, Mr. Mathers: Get your daughters some American Girl dolls.

» Perform "Stan" with the Stanley Cup.

» Take advantage of Chicago's many tall buildings to shoot a music video that involves him standing atop a tall building with outstretched arms. Oh wait, has he done this already?

Party with Perry

Chicago Tribune

Lollapalooza will double the size of a stage devoted to DJs and electronic music at this year's festival, Aug. 5-7 in Grant Park.

Charlie Jones, one of the partners of Texas-based promoters C3 Presents, said the electronic-music area has proved to be the fastest growing musical attraction at the festival since Lollapalooza's 2005 debut in Grant Park.

To accommodate the growth, the Perry's Place stage will be moved to a softball field west of Columbus Avenue on the festival's southern end across from Hutchinson Field, where the main stage is located. The tented Perry's stage will be designed to accommodate more than 15,000 fans, double the size of last year's location farther north.

Here are the artists set to appear at Perry's in the Park:

Simon's dropping names like it's hot in the quest for his new judges

Simon Cowell has dropped so many names as potential judges on his forthcoming U.S. version of the talent show "The X Factor" that he's now in repeats. Though he has only music executive L.A. Reid signed to a contract with two other chairs to fill, Cowell told deadline.com he expects his ex-"American Idol" castmate Paula Abdul and his fellow British "X Factor" judge Cheryl Cole to occupy them when the show premieres this fall.

Cowell's got nothing but praise for Abdul, saying: "I've always wanted Paula. Always been very vocal about that," but we noticed he's been whispering a lot of sweet nothings about other potential judges. We like to call them Simon's Lovely Ladies. TRIBUNE, REDEYE CONTRIBUTED

Cheryl Cole

"She's just got a great ability to communicate. She's a great judge. She's smart. It's just a hunch. If people take to her like the British public did, I think she's going to do really well in America."

Mariah Carey

"Her idea was to be the judge of the judges, which only Mariah could come up with. She'll be involved in some form. I literally adore her. I love her to bits."

Paula Abdul

"I don't know what it is about her, but I've always clicked with her. ... I've never found anyone better than her."

RUMORED

Nicki Minaj

"We spoke to Nicki actually about a lot of projects. ... I'm a big fan of hers."

Jessica Simpson

(at one time considered a front-runner, but no longer) She said: "To be a mentor for up-and-coming artists is right up my alley. ... I love watching people's dreams come true."

ALSO MENTIONED Fergie

The Black Eyed Peas singer's name was "put forward," Cowell said.

MONSTER VISION

Get ready, America. Lady Gaga's latest video, for her song "Judas," is set to premiere next week on "American Idol," mtv.com reports. Gaga co-directed the vid with her creative director, Laurieann Gibson, who said viewers will be "shocked" at "how freeing the message is for all the right reasons."

Of course they will.

Don't tell the FBI

You wouldn't lie to the mob, would you? Apparently 30 percent of British people would. A new survey shows that "The Godfather" is the movie most people claim to have seen, but really haven't—which is a crime, since it's awesome. Rounding out the top five, according to ifc.com, are "Casablanca," "Taxi Driver," "2001: A Space Odyssey" and "Reservoir Dogs." Get your act together, guys!

Speaking of 'The Godfather' ...

Why is the comedy sequel to "The Hangover" called "The Hangover Part II"? It's a nod to "The Godfather," director Todd Phillips told mtv.com, "because I think the film lives up to or exceeds the first one." Yeah, he's probably seen both.

That's nasty ... m'kay?

"South Park" turns 15 this year, and if the clip of Wednesday's season premiere is any indication, the show hasn't lost its ability to offend and disgust. The episode, titled "HUMANCENTIPED," shows Kyle becoming a part of a new and disgusting Apple product. As if we wanted to be reminded of "Human Centipede."

'Jump' for joy

Johnny Depp is returning to his roots—at least for a few seconds. Depp is expected to make a cameo in the big-screen adaptation of "21 Jump Street," the '80s hit that launched him to stardom, ew.com reports. The film is scheduled for a March 2012 release with new cast of stars including Jonah Hill, Channing Tatum and Ice Cube.
